Sydney University uses Præmium to educate the next generation fund managers

MEDIA RELEASE

Sydney, 30 June 2008

University of Sydney students will now be able to receive an extra bonus in their education - complimentary access to Præmium's portfolio administration service (V-Wrap) and market data system (p-Desktop).

ASX-listed portfolio administration specialist, Præmium Limited, today announced that it has linked with the University's School of Mathematics to assist students, many of whom are destined for careers in the Australian funds management industry.

Sydney University's School of Mathematics plans to incorporate the systems into its curriculum for Optimisation of Financial Mathematics, a core unit for the undergraduate degree in Financial Mathematics.

The systems will also be used by staff from the School of Mathematics to assist in the research of the behaviour of financial markets.

Mr Arthur Naoumidis, Præmium's Group CEO, said, 'I am extremely pleased to provide Sydney University with access to Præmium's leading edge systems as our contribution to assist in furthering the education of the next generation fund managers and stock brokers. This is a great opportunity for students to apply their knowledge of portfolio theory and get a hands-on feel for the real world.'

Dr Will Bertram, Head of the Financial Mathematics Group, from Sydney University said, 'Præmium's systems will allow us to pursue new avenues of research. In terms of teaching, we are looking forward to incorporating such a useful tool into our program. It will give our students unique insights into the applications of the theory that they are taught.'
